“ It's been almost 20 years since I first started talking to her. I never pictured that this is way that it would end. We made it through our teen years, college and adult life. The silly conversations that made sense only to us, the randomness of both of us and how as life went on that the only thing had passed between us was time. I am going to miss her Georgia drawl and arguing over which of us had the accent. I don't think we ever had a fight and if we did it was over quick. She helped me with my divorce and always sharing pictures of David with me. Now the phrase that we always greeted each other with was miss you, love you and will now have a new meaning.
