“ Christy and I met in a Chatty Cathy doll group and became friends. I rerooted a Chatty for Amy and it looked a lot like her. Christy's struggles are over now and she's been reunited with Amy. My deepest condolences go out to Chad. Rest well, Christy. ❤️🌹❤️

“ I had Donated my children's music therapy CD to Christy and Chad's daughter Amy.
Such a beautiful family it's just so tragic that this had to take over Amy and then Christy.
Everything that beautiful family has endured, It's just so sad.
Amy loves my little pony, and princesses and well, Chad and Christy love Amy. She is their whole world.
Christy was always such a kind hearted friend.
I know that they will someday all be reunited again, and in the meantime, I pray for Chads aching heart. I know that his beautiful girls will guide and protect.
🙏Amy, 🙏Christy and 🙏Chad

“ I met the most kindest and living Christy online many years ago. I was just 17 and now I am 32. Throughout those years I was blessed to know Christy. She supported me through so many of my health issues. My brain surgery, dystonia, seizures, autism and many more. Her strength and kindness inspired me to be a better version of myself every day. To keep fighting. Christy blessed me to know Amy, her wonderful daughter. I painted a lovely picture of Amy, derived from a photograph for her as a princess. The love I feel for Christy's family hasn't faltered since then. It really is amazing how much 'strangers', from across the sea, can have such an impact on one's life and Christy showed me more love and compassion through a screen than I'd ever had in person. I have many thanks to give her. She turned my life around and I continue to live with both Amy and Christy in my heart. I have a daughter now, 3years old. Autistic and epileptic. She will know Amy and she will know Christy. My promise is to make sure these two amazing people live on for many years. We didn't share faith, however, I believe wholeheartedly that they are now reunited. Mother and daughter, together as it should always be. Chad, I offer do many condolences for your losses. Your journey has also been so inspiring to me. You are what so many wish for in a lifetime companion. You, Christy and Amy always will be family to me. Please take care of yourself. I am sending all of my love and I will be thinking of you.

“ Christy suffered greatly in this life and grieved even more her loss of Amy. I rejoice, thinking of her in the love, comfort and peace of the Lord with Amy though we are so sad she is gone from us. I hope to be there on the 13th, Chad.
