“ There are too many memories to write. All I know is his love and humor will always be with me locked safely in my heart. Until I see you again my brother, keep on jammin and please save me a spot on that stage in the sky because we're gonna blow the dust out of the clouds when I get there! Prayers and much love to the family. If you need me John knows where I am.

“ I remember Jim driving a Volvo station wagon backwards around a small dry sinkhole at a very fast speed, also , him later replacing the fuel tank by himself, after his motorcycle accident, as many other fond memories. I don't think Jim was afraid of death; I think he was too busy living his best life. Jim was an inspiration to anyone who has had life throw them curve balls. I hope that everyone remembers his strength. He will be missed. Love to all of the Oglesby family. ❤️❤️❤️❤️❤️

This is Jack & Tina Tison ... we just found out about Jim. Our hearts are so broken over losing Jim so young. He was one of the only true friends we have ever known. He was honest enough a friend to get on our butts when he saw he needed to and still make you glad he did. He inspired us as people and also to be better musicians... without it, we would never have produced our own music for the public to hear and he made it abundantly clear that if you want to do something you thought was 'impossible', not to worry because you really could do it. I want all of you, family and friends, to know that he was a great blessing to everyone he even crossed paths with because of his obvious and outright Love for everyone. I remember him asking me to teach him how to play bass with only the use of one hand, I showed him how I thought he might could do so, he borrowed my bass for a couple days, came back after and was playing Rush's New World Man as good or better than I could though I had been breaking down their albums for quite some time! That's the kinda man and friend he was. He will be sorely missed. Love you guys...we pray for you all.

One day he was trying to explain to me how tough that light blue Volvo was. He grabbed a crowbar and started wailing away on it. Didn't even put a dent on it. He had a special way with words but a more special way with love. When he loved you, you KNEW it!
