“ Sending you all my love and prayers. I have so many wonderful memories of being in her home and how she always made me feel so welcome and part of the family. I also know she is the person who first introduced me to pimento and cheese and I think she made some of the best ever! Amazing woman and mother!

“ Things My Momma Taught Me 1. How to honor and respect my parents, especially when they were within reach. 2. Never forget there is no one any better than I am and I am no better than anyone else. 3. How to work HARD. 4. How to appreciate what I DO have because I could have a lot less. 5. How to clean up behind myself. 6. How to cook for myself. 7. How to iron my own clothes. 8. How to appreciate reading 9. If I dish it out on the plate, I better be able to eat it. This applied not only to my food but in how I treated others. 10. How to live without her. Number 10 sums everything on the list and more. She taught me that the greatest and hardest job a momma has is to teach her children how to live without her. Had she not taught me to care for myself, work for what I have, appreciate other people, respect myself and others, never dish out what I ain't willing to eat....then I would never stand on my own and I would never be able to let go when the time came. The time came yesterday morning. I may have to let go but I will never live without her because there are too many things I carry with me because of her. Dona

“ Grandma made the best biscuits! I used to sit at the kitchen table when I was a little girl and watch her make them. Oh, they were so good! Give my love to everyone in Heaven, Grandma. Oh, what a glorious reunion! I love you!

“ Lyle, I am very sorry to hear of your loss. It is always difficult losing those you care about, even when you know they are in God's hands. May your family be comforted. "The Lord is my rock, my fortress and my deliverer; my God in whom I take refuge." Psalms 18:2
