“ Aunt Linda was a joy to my life and a great source of encouragement when I needed someone to listen and understand during a bad period of time. She made life fun on our visits together when I was young. We laughed and joked while swimming in the creek and barbecuing on the sandbanks. Once we ladies and young girls got a bad sunburn while wading around in the water at the beach because we were so absorbed with having fun and delving into deep wonderful conversation that we forgot the bare shoulders the sun was more than happy to scorch. What pain we endured that night as we tried to hide our flaming shoulders from Uncle Osborn and my Daddy because Aunt Linda and Mama said they were not going to listen to “I told you so” from those two men....LOL. We all looked so forward to the summer visits together and even though the time was short the bonding was permanent in our hearts and lives. I loved talking about jewelry and perfumes with Aunt Linda. And boy could she cook!! When we visited with y’all I remember well the mouth watering smell of biscuits, eggs, sausage and pancakes drifting all over the house causing everyone to get out of bed and run to the kitchen to fill our bellies each morning. She planned every meal to the pleasure of all her guests. She was concerned so much for our comfort that she and Uncle Osborn gave up their bedroom for my little family so that I would have quick access to the bath and kitchen to make our son more comfortable and make my stay more enjoyable. She did all this while Grace and Kevin’s wedding day and day before activities were taking place. Even though her hands were full and she had not a minute to spare, she saw to it that her guests needs came first. She was a good daughter in law to my grandmother regardless of the fact that Grandma could prove to be a hand full. She was patient and kind; and Grandma loved her dearly. She and Uncle Osborn both would go out of their way to do things for me and my brothers because they cared for and about us. I am sure Uncle Osborn met, fell in love with and shared his life with his true soul mate. If Aunt Linda was ever frustrated with anyone, she never showed it. During our precious times together she demonstrated unending patience with all life and all people. If she had any complaints, she never voiced them to us. She was a good friend to my mom, and they enjoyed each other's company greatly. I was thrilled that she spent the last two days of my "single life" with me running errands and helping me prepare for my wedding. She is an example of the virtuous woman who works willingly, feeds her family well, is wise in her purchases, reaches out to help others, is strong and honorable, wise and kind. What a beautiful wife and mother; and what a beautiful aunt for me. I wait until I see her in that beautiful mansion prepared for her.
