“ Jake, in your case, there can never be justice. Justice would be you coming back from the coffin your wife put you in. I am happy to tell you that after many attempts to bring your killer to justice, it has been done!! Your greedy, selfish wife put a bullet in your head. You can FINALLY rest in peace. I hope the metal bed your wife is sleeping in is just one of many daily reminders that her actions are why you are where you are today 🙏

“ I am so sad to hear of your passing. I remember all the long talks we had in the cafe. I remember the way you used to smile and ask about "Buck Rogers" meat. I was looking forward to your return and our talks, in another time my friend, and a different place,

“ My dearest Jake, I used to joke with mom about being the best child ever if you were my dad because I always knew you kept me in line even though you weren't. It deeply saddens me that whatever your sorrows may have been, they put you in the place they have which led to demise. I hate that it had to be this way and with no goodbyes and no chances to change your mind. I know it has been many years since we've last seen each other, maybe right after I graduated high school I think. I remember you playing football with the guys at the family reunion. You were so happy and I know it brought many smiles to many people's faces, especially William's and Nans. I want you to know that you have played a part in shaping me and molding me from a blond hair blue eyed little girl into an independent vibrant young adult that I am today. I love you and will miss you for all eternity! One day, in God's time, we will meet again and reunite with all our family as one and remember the good times. For now, I know you are no longer hurting and are now free like doves flying freely across the sky. God speed Jake! All my love!

“ I'm so proud to be your sister when I think of all the things you've done not to mention that you are one of the most dedicated and devoted fathers I have ever met. I can never remember a time when you weren't making me laugh till my jaws hurt and my sides ached. You were my brother, friend and best buddy. I loved being with you and sharing jokes, thoughts, secrets and memories. This past year and a half has really been a struggle but you always pulled through and always reminded me how lucky you were. You have shown me on many occasions to stick together and everything will be ok even when things didn't quite add up. I find comfort knowing you loved me as much as I loved you and I will never stop loving you but for now I keep you in my heart remembering the good times and knowing that one day we will reunite. God Bless You and Rest In Peace.
